Anthony Anikeeff is co-chair of the firm's government contracts practice. His practice encompasses counseling, investigations, litigation, trial and appellate work, and training. He also is part of the firm's white collar team handling civil False Claims Act and related matters.

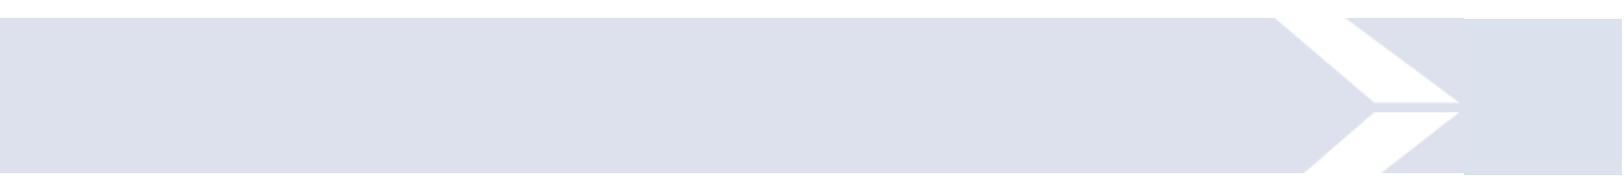

He represents domestic and foreign companies with respect to conducting business with the federal and state governments. He advises contractors, subcontractors, and third party stakeholders regarding many of the issues that arise in the context of these efforts, such as: obtaining contracts, schedule contracts, teaming and subcontracting, mergers and acquisitions, set-asides and small business issues, financing, privatization, solicitation evaluation, contract interpretation, procurement integrity, regulatory compliance and training, intellectual property protection, conflicts of interest, contract performance, security clearances, dispute avoidance, and FOIA. He also advises clients regarding export licensing.

Anthony advises and represents clients involved in negotiations, bid protests, claims, and terminations. A significant portion of his practice is devoted to representing clients in False Claims Act and qui tam matters, suspension and debarment matters, government and internal investigations and associated voluntary and mandatory disclosures. He also has assisted entities in developing compliance plans and training their employees.

He advises overseas entities in establishing a U.S. presence to do business with the U.S. Government. He also has advised entities in qualifying to do business in Afghanistan and in performing work for the armed forces overseas. He also advises and represents clients regarding proceedings before the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States (CFIUS) and in seeking Department of Homeland Security designation or certification under the SAFETY Act.

Anthony has represented clients in diverse sectors such as aerospace, cybersecurity, energy, engineering, financial services, information technology, medical products and services, ground support equipment, manufacturing, military products, heavy industry, construction, security, human capital, and various services industries. He has represented clients in matters involving the Departments of Defense, Homeland Security, Energy, Agriculture, Health and Human Services, Transportation, and Interior as well as National Air and Space Administration, the General Services Administration, the Small Business Administration and other agencies. He also has represented clients before various state agencies.

He is a seasoned trial and appellate lawyer who has first chaired numerous cases to conclusion. Anthony has represented clients in matters before various Federal and state courts, the Boards of Contract Appeal, the General Accountability Office. As appropriate, he advances client interests through litigation, trial, appeal and alternative methods of dispute resolution. In doing so, he draws upon experience representing the United States for many years in resolving complex, high-dollar contractual, statutory, regulatory, and constitutional disputes, as well as Congressional Reference matters while serving as a Trial Attorney, Senior Trial Counsel and Assistant Director in the Civil Division, U.S. Department of Justice. He is a frequent speaker on government contracts and has testified as an expert witness on such matters.

Anthony earned his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Virginia. He received his Juris Doctor degree from the College of William & Mary Marshall-Wythe School of Law and his Master of Laws degree from the London School of Economic and Political Science.

Following law school, Anthony served as served as law clerk to the Hon. D. Dortch Warriner, U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Virginia. Prior to joining Williams Mullen, Anthony served as practice leader at an international law firm in Washington., D.C.
